

Gavin is an industry thought leader in Health Informatics who has spent the last 8 years focusing on the application of interoperability standards, governance and industry best practices to improve organizational delivery of eHealth initiatives. He has 13 years of health informatics experience focusing primarily on the electronic exchange of health information and its application in information systems, which has given him deep insight into the complexity of the eHealth industry and the numerous roles and perspectives required to effectively govern projects and programs. Gavin has spoken at numerous conferences and has published dozens of articles in industry journals, trade magazines, and newsletters.